

Yue-Liang Guo

• Current position:

- Attending Physician, Department of Environmental and Occupational Medicine, National Taiwan University Hospital.

• Specialty:

- Occupational Medicine
- Environmental Toxicology
- Internal Medicine

- Overwork

• Education:

- Ph.D. - Johns Hopkins University, Environmental Health Sciences, Occupational
- Medicine
- M.P.H. - Harvard University, School of Public Health
- M.D. - National Taiwan University, School of Medicine

• Career and certification:

- Distinguished Professor, Environmental and Occupational Medicine, College of Medicine, National Taiwan University.
- Distinguished Investigator and Director, National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences, National Health Research

Institutes, Zhunan

- Attending Physician, Department of Internal Medicine and Department of Environmental and Occupational Medicine, National Taiwan University Hospital.
- Attending Physician, Department of Internal Medicine and Department of Environmental and Occupational Medicine, National Cheng-Kung University Hospital
- Occupational Medicine House Staff, University of California at San Francisco
- Internal Medicine House Staff, Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center

• Reminder from Dr. Guo:

Working in any industry has been associated with stress and potential hazards of many sorts. If you think that your health has been affected by your work, you may have been a victim of occupational disease. One should provide efforts and thoughts for the work, but should not sacrifice health.

NTUHF