

Ya-Chi Hsieh

• Current position:

- Clinical Psychologist, Clinical Psychology Center, National Taiwan University Hospital.

• Specialty:

- Developmental, behavioural, emotional and psychosocial assessment for children and adolescents
- Parent-child interaction assessment and therapy

- Autism assessments and psychotherapy
- Neurotrauma

• Education:

- MD, Department of Psychology, National Chung Cheng University.

• Career and certification:

- Clinical Psychologist, Chang Gung Memorial hospital.

• Reminder from Psychologist Hsieh:

Parents often concern about children's physical and psychological development. Do my children grow in a healthy way? Especially when something goes wrong, we may doubt ourself about what have or haven't been done. Actually, there' s no gold standard about upbringing ° Children' s temperament, parent' s nurturing value, and family development are all important. Sometimes when we look back to ourselves and adjust our steps with our partners, we can better understand our children and develop good family communication, so as to accompany our children to grow their own uniqueness.