• Reminder from Dr. Shen:

Prevention is more important than treatment. Maintaining good oral hygiene with proper dental care practices can improve overall health. It is recommended to have regular dental check-ups every six months, which helps to effectively remove dental calculus and prevent the occurrence of periodontal diseases, as well as keep your teeth white and bright. Besides, taking the first step to visit the dentist is a brave decision. It is natural to feel worried about dental visits. However, we will do our best to ensure that patients feel at ease and comfortable. For individuals with specific disabilities, regular check-ups every three months are recommended.
