

Jui-Yo Hsu

• Current position:

- Attending Physician, Department of Orthopedic Surgery, National Taiwan University Hospital

• Specialty:

- General Orthopedics
- Spine Surgery (Minimally Invasive Endoscopic Spine Surgery, Degenerative Spine Diseases, Spinal Deformities, Spinal Tumors)
- Orthopedic Trauma/ Fractures
- Minimally Invasive Orthopedic Surgery

- Osteoporosis

• Education:

- M.D., School of Medicine, National Taiwan University.

• Career and certification:

- Adjunct Lecturer, Department of Orthopedics, College of Medicine, National Taiwan University
- Attending Physician, Department of Orthopedic Surgery, National Taiwan University Hospital, Yunlin Branch
- Chief Resident, Department of Orthopedic Surgery, National Taiwan University Hospital
- Medical Expert, Medical Service Review for Orthopedic Surgery, National Health Insurance Administration, Ministry of Health and Welfare

•Reminder from Dr. Hsu:

Modern lifestyles vary greatly, and both young and elderly individuals may experience discomfort in the shoulders, neck, back, or limbs due to spinal diseases. Today's spinal orthopedic surgeries provide minimally invasive and highly precise treatment options, with personalized medical care tailored to individual needs. When spinal problems are suspected, or if related symptoms arise, it is advisable to seek professional evaluation and treatment early to ensure the best possible outcome.